MODEL UNITED NATIONS AT THE UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, IRVINE

UCIMUN 2026 | April 25-26, 2026 | sites.uci.edu/ucimun

Dear Delegates,

From the ruins of war to the chambers of law, the pursuit of justice continues for all. Welcome to the International Court of Justice (ICJ) at UCIMUN's 34th Annual High School Conference. My name is Jherica Paulino, and I am exhilarated to be the Director of the United Nations International Court of Justice! This committee wouldn't be possible without our vibrant Assistant Directors: first-year Elena Perez and third-year Nina Xu. We are so honored to grow alongside you this weekend, debating through thoughtful discourse and making irreplaceable MUN memories through our specialized spin on the ICJ.

As a rising second-year at UC Irvine, I am majoring in Political Science and International Studies on a pre-law track. This aspiration had been cultivated long-time through Model UN in high school, entering the world of diplomacy freakishly reluctant to unmute through a Zoom conference. 18 staff, secretariat, and Secretary-General experiences later, I am bound to the shackles of MUN forever, now staffing and competing internationally at the collegiate level as a delegate for UCIMUN's Travel Team. Outside of MUN, I hold office in multiple pre-law organizations, am a UCI Campus Representative, and live for spontaneous foodie adventures.

With this conference likely being many of your final hurrahs of your MUN career, look around! International policy and relations shape our rapidly changing world, working clause by clause to change it not for power, but for principle. The International Court of Justice is the only international court authorized to resolve general legal disputes between nations, and is widely recognized as the authoritative source on nearly all international law. As one of the six principal organs of the United Nations, nearly every single nation is privy to the ICJ since its founding in 1946. Since then, the court has deliberated over 200 cases, each foundational to reinforcing claims to sovereignty and conflict prevention.

The former communist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (FRY) has had a long history of jurisprudence battles within the ICJ, with 12 contentious cases surrounding Genocide Convention cases and ten Legality of Use of Force cases with nations involved with the NATO bombing campaign. During UCIMUN 2026, we will be focusing on two key cases surrounding Yugoslavia, its legal successor states, and its retaliatory powers (including but not limited to NATO): [Serbia and Montenegro v. Belgium] and [Bosnia and Herzegovina v. Yugoslavia].

In the end, there's a reason why Yugoslavia isn't on our world maps anymore. However, it is our responsibility at this UCIMUN to identify holes in the case. Like ICJ judges, we must render each case as impartial constituents to settle in the most humanitarian way. To effectively treat these cases under its accurate historical depiction, we ask that you neither look up the case nor the outcome and its immediate geopolitical consequences. Aside from this topic synopsis, we encourage you to look up the key international arguments surrounding the case while refraining to read any judgement of any of the Legality of Force cases or Genocide Convention cases to preserve the sanctity of the committee.

Watch out - our crisis staffers have some creative twists to change the status quo of how we remember history. For this, encourage you to think maximally, debate tenaciously, and just maybe, give me a candy bar when we meet for the conference. Zot! Zot! Zot!

Jherica Paulino (she/her)
Director | International Court of Justice

International Court of Justice | Rules of Procedure

AUTHORITY AND APPLICABILITY:

These Rules of Procedure govern the proceedings of the International Court of Justice (ICJ) Committee at UCIMUN, designed to simulate the jurisdiction, authority, and judicial practice of the International Court of Justice. With a unique specialized twist, we also will be incorporating a crisis-style backroom that effectively addresses the real-world applicable consequences of the provisions made in court (throughout debate). The crisis staffers will be trained to offer feedback on compliance threats from citizens and external NGOs/UN organizations, outline state defiance as a consequence of written provisions, and will escalate the situation in the most engaging way!

Each delegate will represent judges that stand in the ICJ who are inducted by the UN from their diversity in background and sworn impartiality. Although traditionally, there are 15 judges of the ICJ, we may add more/add Ad Hoc judges or country representatives according to the developments of the conference addendum. Regardless, in the event of a tiebreaker for any unanimity cases in the trial, President Shi will be responsible for governing on those grounds. In proper trial proceedings, we will have ICJ-exclusive specialized rules of procedure, statements from each judge, and will collaboratively need to create a memorandum of pleadings per speaking cycle. Fundamentally, each new clause is affected by the court's (judges) deliberation of evidence and any external factors (backroom activity) that may impede on the case in real time.

PRE CONFERENCE POSITION PAPERS:

MODEL UNITED NATIONS AT THE UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, IRVINE

UCIMUN 2026 | April 25-26, 2026 | sites.uci.edu/ucimun

Traditionally, within the ICJ, Judges will come prepared to court with a written opinion, and interested states that may or may not be involved in the Contentious Case (State v. State) will submit written statements. For the purposes of UCIMUN ICJ, everyone is to submit a Written Proceeding Memorial including the following elements:

1. Statement of Facts
2. Jurisdictional Arguments
3. Legal Grounds
4. Requested Remedies

Note: Although you will not get reprimanded for using general position paper guidelines, it is highly smiled upon to utilize the framework of elements as listed above to more effectively translate your requested remedies into the later mentioned Legal Briefs and Dissents. These will later be translated into the Final Judgement

If you are a judge, you were elected to these positions to be non-partisan. If you represent a country or Agent, you may submit a Counter-Memorial (preliminary dissent for/against a state or party). For all delegates, we highly recommend you to create an opening statement outlining your stance and potential for leading international remedies to this case.

JURISDICTION OF THE COURT:

The Court may exercise:

- ❖ Contentious Jurisdiction over disputes between states that have consented to ICJ jurisdiction (UN member states, no observers. This will be very influential in your decision making!)

MODEL UNITED NATIONS AT THE UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, IRVINE

UCIMUN 2026 | April 25-26, 2026 | sites.uci.edu/ucimun

- ❖ Advisory Jurisdiction over legal questions submitted by the dais, UN bodies, or other intragovernmental agencies

According to dais discretion, jurisdiction and admissibility are subject to challenge as new evidence and crisis developments arise. Please simply call on a simple “Point of Order” to address such disparities.

STRUCTURE OF PROCEEDINGS

- I. Roll Call: At the beginning of each committee session OR at the beginning of a new Seisin of the Court (a.k.a. Switching from Topic A to Topic B)
- II. Motion to Open Debate: This procedure will primarily be led by the dais, outlining the structure of debate, reiterating the Rules of Procedure, and answering any additional questions relevant to reinforcing the flow of debate.
 - A. Each “Member of the Court” will declare under Article 20 of the Statute: “I solemnly declare that I will perform my duties as a judge honorably, impartially, and conscientiously, and that I will faithfully observe all provisions of the Statute and of the Rules of the Court”.
- III. Opening of the Court and Seisin: The nature of the case will be discussed, describing the legal questions presented, and the parties or requesting bodies involved.
 - A. Within this section of debate, Judges/individuals will be able to inquire about jurisdictional posture or procedural concerns
- IV. Perpetual Moderated Caucus: This will be the primary debate format throughout all committee sessions, operating as such for the majority of proceedings.

MODEL UNITED NATIONS AT THE UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, IRVINE
UCIMUN 2026 | April 25-26, 2026 | sites.uci.edu/ucimun

- A. Judges will be able to speak on a rolling basis without the need for formal motions
- B. Speeches should focus on jurisdiction, admissibility, interpretation of international law (and applications from the relevant active statutes), evaluation of factual circumstances (including the nature of crisis updates), and the legal implications of crisis updates.
- C. At any point in the perpetual moderated caucus, any delegate may break the cycle, raise their placards, and request for any of the following points or orders:
 1. Raise your placard and say “Judge ____ Motions to enter a <Moderated Caucus/ Unmoderated Caucus / Voting Procedure>, <Reasoning/time if applicable>.

V. Memorandum of Pleadings:

- A. This is an Iterative Judicial Drafting that is consistently constructed throughout debate. Each speaking cycle may result in the proposal may result in the proposal, amendment, or removal of clauses addressing facts, jurisdictional determinations, legal standards and precedents, provisional conclusions or remedies
- B. The Dais will be updating a word document as each clause is voted on. Please see the subsection “Voting Procedures” for voting technicalities

VI. Unmoderated Caucus: Judges will consult informally, reconcile legal approaches, or draft clauses collaboratively. This may also commence in response to a crisis update or debriefing a Memorandum of Pleadings.

- A. “Motion for a ____ Minute Unmoderated Caucus” may be smiled upon at any point of the Perpetual Moderated Caucus

MODEL UNITED NATIONS AT THE UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, IRVINE
UCIMUN 2026 | April 25-26, 2026 | sites.uci.edu/ucimun

VII. Judicial Directives: Judges and Agents may articulate any provisional legal views during debate, or submit written directives, opinion briefs, or calls out to other organizations to the crisis backroom.

- A. This aspect of the debate encourages creativity. While maintaining your posture as a Judge or Agent, you can dictate means to mediate resolution in ways that may not be as smiled upon by the delegate's front room (in terms of negotiation).
- B. Judicial Directives must have some sort of decorum. Yes, they can be funny, but they must be realistic. The Yugoslav Wars of Independence was a real event, and its real-life implications/casualties were also intense.

VIII. Motion to Introduce Judgement or Advisory Opinion: When sufficient deliberation has been made, and multiple cycles of presenting a “Memorandum of Pleadings” have been made, the President (or in case of their absence, a 75% majority of delegates) may make this motion.

- A. Judges may refine operative language through debate or informal drafting.
- B. Consensus is encouraged, but not required. This step finalizes the Judgement or Advisory Opinion.

IX. Final Deliberation and Adoption of Judgement

- A. “Motion for the Adoption of Judgement”: This step finalizes the Judgement or Advisory Opinion.
- B. Separate and dissenting opinions may be authored, voting for or against (with or without rights, if applicable).
 1. If we are “Voting With Rights”, there will be two rounds of voting.
 - a) Round 1 voting options: Yes, No, Yes with Rights, No with Rights.

MODEL UNITED NATIONS AT THE UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, IRVINE

UCIMUN 2026 | April 25-26, 2026 | sites.uci.edu/ucimun

(1) Voting “With Rights” offers you the option to plead to the court why your perspective prevails, subject to happening via dais discretion given the timing.

(2) Voting “With Rights” also enables 2 for 2 against among the people that voted with/without rights.

b) Round 2 voting options: Yes, No.

(1) The result of this opinion will be the standing jurisdiction that rests the case.

C. Adoption occurs by majority vote, with the President exercising a casting vote in the event of a tie.

VOTING PROCEDURES

Structurally, each Judge and Agent will create blocs that are similar to the same dissenting opinion or resolution, effectively using unmoderated caucuses to send provisions to the backroom. After each speaking cycle (or committee session; substantiation of debate is up to dais discretion), each bloc will present their opinions led by 1 or 2 presiding sponsors.

When front room directives (a.k.a. Memorandum of Pleadings) are fully deliberated between blocs, delegates may vote to enter voting procedure.

- ❖ To do this, delegates must say “Motion to Enter Voting Procedures”.
- ❖ Furthermore, they can specify presentation order and Q&A procedure after entering the voting bloc.
 - Eg. “Motion to Reorder the Memorandum of Pleadings in the order it was received, with a 3 minute Q&A session”

MODEL UNITED NATIONS AT THE UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, IRVINE

UCIMUN 2026 | April 25-26, 2026 | sites.uci.edu/ucimun

- Due to dais discretion, we will not be offering for/against speeches.

Upon presenting their draft Memorandum of Pleadings, delegates are able to motion for a Q&A session. When all dissenting points and authorities are listed, then we will vote one-by-one on each Memorandum of Pleadings by Voting by Dividing the Question.

- ❖ Voting by Dividing the Question means that each clause in a Memorandum of Pleadings is read out and voted on one-by-one.
- ❖ After Voting by Dividing the Question for one set of a Memorandum of Pleadings (bloc), then we will transition to the next Memorandum as specified by motion to enter the voting procedure.

Throughout all committee sessions, us, dais, will be creating a living document of all of the passed clauses throughout all committee sessions (this will not be editable until final dissenting opinions are made). We as the dais will consistently update the committee with timed updates to effectively create space for the two topics. General rule of thumb: please expect to reserve Topic 1 to wrap up around 75% of the committee day on Day 1, and for Topic 2 to begin during the last committee session on Day 1. Of course, this is up to dais discretion according to the proper flow of debate.

CRISIS (BACKROOM) INTEGRATION

Crisis Staffers shall operate as a backroom simulating international, political, legal, and factual developments external to the Court. Crisis Staffers will come into the committee at any time, able to introduce some of the following (please do consider potential remedies to this list below as it will engage debate more effectively):

- ❖ Treaty withdrawals or ratifications

MODEL UNITED NATIONS AT THE UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, IRVINE
UCIMUN 2026 | April 25-26, 2026 | sites.uci.edu/ucimun

- ❖ New UN resolutions
- ❖ State compliance or defiance
- ❖ Armed conflict escalation or de-escalation
- ❖ Economic sanctions or humanitarian crises
- ❖ Legal revelations impacting jurisdiction or evidence

AUTHORITY OF THE DAIS

The Dais retains absolute authority over the interpretation of these rules, admissibility of evidence, timing and structure of proceedings, and the integration of crisis developments.

All decisions of the Dais are final and binding.

Topic A: Serbia and Montenegro v. Belgium

Introduction

In the case concerning Serbia and Montenegro v. Belgium, The Republic of Serbia and Montenegro charges Belgium on multiple breaches of international law from its use of force, intervention of its internal affairs, violation of sovereignty, and the destruction of cultural heritage sites. Alongside Belgium, NATO members have engaged in the support of the Kosovo Liberation Army (KLA) giving funding, resources, and training, whilst targeting Serbia and Montenegro via bomb to attack government buildings and infrastructure.

In the case Republic of Serbia and Montenegro v. Belgium, it calls into question the sanctity of a ‘humanitarian war’. The petitioners (who are the former Federal Republic of Yugoslavia) render NATO’s bombing campaigns illegal, campaigns that were done to protect the goodwill of ethnic inhabitants of Kosovo liberation movement and Vojvodina’s autonomy, gridlocked into the communist republic for good. Belgium and nine other members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) engaged in military action on the former Yugoslavian state to prevent potential genocide on the dominantly ethnically homogeneous Albanians, already holding autonomy. Considering how the state is outnumbered, Serbia and Montenegro had applied the same allegations and requests for the indication of provisional measures to those 10 NATO states.

The court justices must deliberate whether Belgium and the other NATO members were within its peacekeeping, humanitarian rights to defend a repressed minority from potential genocide, as did Serbia and Montenegro to other autonomous ethnic groups in the Balkans. Alternatively, Serbia and Montenegro hold that Belgium acted rashly under a neo-imperialist agenda by supporting the Kosovar independence movement. In other words, the ethnic cleansing of Kosovo from Yugoslavia alludes to the next topic, addressing the internal turmoil that eventually dissolved the FRY.

The International Court of Justice must discuss the degree of jurisdiction they possess over the case relative to the ICJ Statute and the UN status of both Serbia and Montenegro and Belgium. In this topic synopsis, we will lay out the evidence apparent to this case, including a discussion of the facts of the case, legal cases surrounding its jurisprudence, and the petitions from both sides.

Facts of the Case

On April 29th, 1999, Serbia and Montenegro filed an Application instituting proceedings against Belgium for “violation of the obligation not to use force”, accusing Belgium of bombing Yugoslav territory together alongside other members of NATO: Canada, France, Germany, Italy, Netherlands, Portugal, Spain, the United Kingdom, and the United States. On the same day, it submitted a request for the indication of provisional measures, asking the Court to order Belgium to “cease immediately its acts of use of force” and to “refrain from any act of threat or use of force” against Serbia and Montenegro. Serbia and Montenegro then invoked Article 36, Section 2 of the ICJ’s Statute, which cements the jurisdiction of the Court with regards to legal disputes, question of international law, or a breach of an international obligation.

In a supplement to its Application submitted to the Court on May 12th, 1999, Serbia and Montenegro invoked, as an additional ground of jurisdiction, Article 4 of the Convention of Conciliation, Judicial Settlement and Arbitration between Belgium and the Kingdom of Serbia and Montenegro, signed at Belgrade on March 25th, 1930.

Issue

Using Serbia and Montenegro's supplements to their application: Article 36(2) of the International Court of Justice (ICJ), Article IX of the 1940 Convention, and Article IX of the 'Genocide Convention', it is unclear to what extent the ICJ can do to support this case, considering the transition of Serbia and Montenegro from a socialist republic to a general republic.

The aftermath of the breakup of Yugoslavia has left Serbia and Montenegro fragmented (as had elsewhere in the Balkans) and lacks complete recognition as a sovereign UN state through its transition into autonomy. This resulted in the need to turn to the UN Security Council (UNSC) according to Article 35(2) of the ICJ Statute. The UNSC issued resolution 777, which advises against participation in the UN General Assembly until their membership to the United Nations gets recognized, effectively questioning Serbia and Montenegro's adherence to their jurisdiction in accordance with ICJ and other forums of international law. Considering this, Belgium denies this argument, considering the jurisdiction of the court does not account for Serbia and Montenegro, arguing that their recognition is invalid without membership to the UN.

Belgium conveys that theirs and NATO's influence in Serbia and Montenegro was to prevent a "humanitarian catastrophe" with UNSC resolution 1244's right to commence military action on the state for their well-being. The UNSC also expressed their concern for the Serbia and Montenegro genocides to the Kosovar people from the KLA formation with resolutions 1160 and 1199, yet the state proceeded with genocide and acts of ethnic cleansing.

Serbia and Montenegro counter this through Belgium and the other members of NATO breaking international law, and challenging their sovereignty by breaching the state's individual affairs with the Albanian ethnic group. Using Article 36(2) of the ICJ Statute and Article 9 of the ‘Genocide Convention’, they argue Belgium’s intervention was intrusive on their sovereignty.

These arguments call into question the jurisdiction of the UN to act upon Serbia and Montenegro as a non-UN state, suggesting their application and indications for provisional measures. Additionally, the International Court of Justice calls to set the extent of power or aid Belgium can give to the Kosovo Liberation Army, challenging Serbia and Montenegro’s internal affairs. To supplement this humanitarian and political issue, the ICJ must consider these essential topics to bring light and awareness to these states.

Rule

To first understand the degree to which the ICJ must assist the dispute with Serbia and Montenegro v. Belgium, the ICJ must collaboratively recognize the legal setbacks the former Yugoslavian state faces: being unrecognizable as a UN member state and inability to proceed with the Court considering how the UNSC, as outlined in Article 35(2) of the ICJ Statute, has made a ruling to not participate in the UN General Assembly until the state obtains formal membership.

In accordance with their teetering membership status to the UN, the jurisdiction of the Court and to Serbia and Montenegro is questioned, requiring immediate clarifications. First, the ICJ must understand the legal stance of the state under the Genocide Convention. To make formal rulings on this case, judges should consider the following questions:

1. Do previous contracts of the formal Federation of Yugoslavia and Soviet States of Serbia and Montenegro still stand, or, through their breakup, withstand their reserved powers under Article 9 of this convention as a contracting party?

MODEL UNITED NATIONS AT THE UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, IRVINE
UCIMUN 2026 | April 25-26, 2026 | sites.uci.edu/ucimun

2. Does Article V of the Genocide Convention support or further fragment Serbia and Montenegro in terms of their new Constitutional rights?
3. Does Article V of the Genocide Convention apply to Article 36(2) of the ICJ statute throughout the transitional period of Serbia and Montenegro despite not being a member state of the UN?

Given these guiding questions, the Court should additionally question the jurisdiction of Article IX of the 1930 Convention to clarify whether this ruling stands from the proceedings of the convention, or if the material clears the jurisdiction of Serbia and Montenegro and the ICJ considering the lack of information regarding UN membership. Additionally, the ICJ should consider the personal inflictions of both Serbia and Montenegro and Belgium, specified under the extent of power taken from another state's internal affairs and punishment or understanding of the genocide imposed on the Kosovar people of Serbia and Montenegro. As contemporary genocides are apparent our politics in 2026, considering ethic principles applied to all genocides should be considered when researching this topic:

1. Does Belgium have the right to sustain the damage caused by their force inflicted on Serbia and Montenegro, or should they be punished for their destruction of property and people?
2. What are the consequences (on each geospatial level) of Belgium and NATO to justify their bombing campaigns as 'stopping a humanitarian catastrophe', when the petitioners allegedly committed genocide on its people?
3. Does the historical reservation of Article IX of the Genocide Convention cover up the inflicted genocide on Kosovo enough to surpass the UN punishment for genocide under the convention?

MODEL UNITED NATIONS AT THE UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, IRVINE
UCIMUN 2026 | April 25-26, 2026 | sites.uci.edu/ucimun

The ICJ should look upon the potential liberation of sovereignty for the autonomous Kosovar people, still inhabitants unrecognized by Serbia and Montenegro. They should look to leave the homogeneous Albanian community, protected under their provision of laws and culture without external forces, as is Serbia and Montenegro with Belgium and other NATO states. Consider: would the ICJ be violating its jurisdiction to resolve only international disputes by breaking Serbia and Montenegro, or through the Kosovo Liberation Army having the power to make peace by separating the ethnically homogenous autonomous state?

As these foundational documents provide the basis for the development of your Judicial Briefings, by no means should this be the sole baseline for your rulings. Please research the external context of the case deliberately, particularly regarding humanitarianism and legality of these acts in Yugoslav territory. Ultimately, the role of the judge is to evaluate all facts of the case in an impartial way. Reminder again: please do not look up the resolution of this case - you'll be spoiling the plot, and that's no fun for anyone! If you need any guidance to lead your research, please do not hesitate to contact me at jmpaulin@uci.edu.

Topic B: Bosnia and Herzegovina v. Yugoslavia (and Preliminary objections by Yugoslavia v. Bosnia and Herzegovina)

Introduction

The case of Bosnia and Herzegovina v. Yugoslavia (and Preliminary objections by Yugoslavia v. Bosnia and Herzegovina) considers one primary document of contention: alleged breaches of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide. Bosnia and Herzegovina charges Serbia and Montenegro with responsibility for genocidal acts committed during the Bosnian War, including ethnic cleansing campaigns, mass killings, forced displacement, and the massacre at Srebrenica. Furthermore, bombings were made to Kosovar people who are regarded in Serbia as subjects under their law. Serbia and Montenegro are being charged with genocides with the ICJ and the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia (ICTY).

Throughout the course of history, the Balkans had always been a location of conflict, starting with the formation and downfall of the Ottoman Empire, establishment and disintegration of Yugoslavia. These disputes reveal ethnic tensions throughout the area, calling in the legality, permissibility, or identification of genocide within the Yugoslav contiguous area. This case calls into the question the scope of state responsibility for genocide, particularly where acts are committed by non-state or proxy actors operating within another sovereign territory. However, conflicts like systematic assimilation on ethnic minorities, ethnocentrism through territorial disputes and the ideologies of a perfect nation state, and compromises made through diplomatic parties through international intervention had situated the current state of the Balkans.

Bosnia and Herzegovina alleges that Yugoslavia directly committed, aided and abetted, conspired to commit, or failed to prevent genocide against Bosnian Muslims and other non-Serb populations. Yugoslavia, in turn, denies these claims and raises preliminary objections contesting the Court's jurisdiction, Bosnia and Herzegovina's standing, and the attribution of alleged genocidal acts to the Yugoslav state. The debate and diplomacy surrounding the Yugoslav Wars were impacted by ethnic assimilation and ethnocentrism and alleviated by the support of supranational groups and councils which came to establish modern global alliances.

Between the conflicts of World War I and the Cold War, the Yugoslav Wars (a.k.a. The Balkan Wars of Independence) had empowered many to strive for sovereignty from the greater state of Yugoslavia. Stemming from this, the seven constituent republics fought through bloodshed, genocides against themselves, and thus striving to establish a more representative state. As a result, the International Court of Justice must address not only whether genocide occurred, but whether Yugoslavia can be held legally responsible under international law for those acts.

As motivating factors to ignite World War I, the international acknowledgement of the Balkans' conflict was seen through the assassination of Austro-Hungarian Archduke Franz Ferdinand and highlighted the Yugoslav authoritative, totalitarian, communist regime led by Serbians as its military group had killed him. Additionally, various countries on the Balkan Peninsula had weakened and conquered the Ottoman Empire's European territory after the empire's downfall, embarking on the first Balkan War. From that point in history, a desire for more conquest and sovereignty was heightened as the major ethnic peoples from all seven former republics pushed for independence as totalitarian, oppressive, communist Yugoslav leaders like Josip Tito had motivated disintegration from Yugoslavia.

Judges, your role today is to identify which entity shall prevail as a constituent of the Republic of Yugoslavia, or should all inhabitants be subjected to the wrath of its larger oppressive republics? To what extent are the bombings in Yugoslavia at the fault of the state? Ultimately, what will be the final fate of Yugoslavia - will you keep the strings attached to the war-torn republic or reorganize into sovereign territories?

Facts of the Case

Following the dissolution of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (FRY) in the early 1990s, Bosnia and Herzegovina declared independence in March 1992. Almost immediately, armed conflict erupted within Bosnian territory between Bosnian forces and Bosnian Serb forces. Bosnia and Herzegovina asserts that these Bosnian Serb forces acted with the substantial political, military, and financial support of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro)

Bosnia and Herzegovina filed an application instituting proceedings before the ICJ in 1993, alleging violations of the Genocide Convention. The application claims that Yugoslavia was responsible for genocide, conspiracy to commit genocide, incitement to genocide, and failure to prevent and punish genocide. The atrocities cited include systematic killings, detention camps, sexual violence, destruction of religious and cultural sites, and the mass execution of Bosniak men and boys in Srebrenica in July 1995.

In response, Yugoslavia raised preliminary objections against Bosnia and Herzegovina, arguing that the court lacked jurisdiction under Article IX of the Genocide Convention. This clause enables states to bring claims of genocide before the United Nations to resolve disputes regarding the interpretation of the jurisdiction of international and more localized law, varying in regionalization.

Next, the following preliminary objection surrounded how Yugoslavia was not legally bound by the Convention at the relevant time, due to questions surrounding state succession and UN membership. At the time of Yugoslavia's application to the United Nations, they were subjected to backlash and pushback from the UN given the concurrency of their bombing campaigns against those of Bosnians, Kosovar people, and Srebrenica inhabitants. The acts in question were not attributable to the Yugoslav state, but rather to independent Bosnian Serb forces. These objections seek to prevent the Court from proceeding to the merits of the case.

Issue

The case presents two overarching legal questions for the International Court of Justice: who was responsible for the genocide (the state? Private actors?) and what jurisdiction does the United Nations have to act on such a case?

State responsibility for Genocide can be interpreted under the overarching theme: Can acts committed by Bosnian Serb forces be attributed to Yugoslavia under international law? Did Yugoslavia violate its obligations under the Genocide Convention by committing genocide, aiding or abetting genocide, or failing to prevent and punish genocidal acts.

Furthermore, in terms of jurisdiction and admissibility, the Court must consider Article IX of the Genocide Convention: does this Article grant the International Court of Justice over this dispute? Was Yugoslavia bound by the Genocide Convention during the Bosnian War despite its contested international status following the breakup of Yugoslavia? Do Yugoslavia's preliminary objections preclude the Court from hearing the case on the merits?

These issues require the Court to clarify the limits of treaty obligations, state succession, and attribution in cases involving mass atrocity crimes.

Rule

To properly evaluate this dispute, the International Court of Justice must interpret and apply Articles I, II, III, and Article IX of the Genocide Convention, and Article 36 of the ICJ Statute. The Genocide Convention is the most critical jurisdictional document, obligating states to prevent and punish genocide. The definition of genocide in the realms of the Genocide Convention is considered “acts committed with the intent to destroy, whole or in part, a national, ethnical, racial, or religious group” (UN Genocide Convention). This additionally enumerates punishable acts related to genocide, granting the jurisdiction to the ICJ over disputes concerning the Convention.

Otherwise, Article 36 of the ICJ Statute concerns jurisdiction, developing customary international law principles on state responsibility, attribution, and effective control. Given Yugoslavia’s preliminary objections, the Court must also confront legal uncertainties arising from the dissolution of the states, including whether treaty obligations persist through state succession and whether UN membership is determinative of jurisdiction under the Genocide Convention.

Application and Analysis

In evaluating jurisdiction, the ICJ must determine whether Article IX of the Genocide Convention independently confers jurisdiction regardless of Yugoslavia’s UN membership status. Unlike disputes grounded solely in the ICJ Statute, jurisdiction under the Genocide Convention arises from treaty obligations voluntarily undertaken by states. Bosnia and Herzegovina argues that Yugoslavia, as the successor to the former Yugoslavia, remained bound by the Convention and subject to its dispute resolution mechanism.

MODEL UNITED NATIONS AT THE UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, IRVINE

On attribution, the Court must assess whether the actions of Bosnian Serb forces can be legally attributed to Yugoslavia. This requires examination of the degree of control exercised by Yugoslavia over these forces, including military coordination, funding, and political direction. While Yugoslavia denies effective control, Bosnia and Herzegovina contends that Yugoslavia's influence was substantial enough to establish responsibility, at minimum, for aiding and abetting genocide.

As delegates deliberate this case, they should consider:

- ❖ Does the Genocide Convention impose obligations that survive state dissolution and political transition?
- ❖ What standard of control is necessary to attribute genocidal acts to a state?
- ❖ Can failure to prevent genocide constitute an independent basis for state responsibility?
- ❖ How should the ICJ reconcile its role with that of the ICTY, particularly where individual criminal responsibility has already been adjudicated?

Importantly, the obligation to prevent genocide exists independently of direct participation. If Yugoslavia possessed the capacity to influence events and failed to take reasonable measures to prevent genocidal acts, it may still incur responsibility under Article I of the Convention.

This case therefore forces the Court to confront whether international law can meaningfully hold states accountable for genocide committed through proxy actors, and how high the evidentiary threshold should be in proving such responsibility.

This case represents one of the most consequential genocide cases ever brought before the International Court of Justice. Its resolution will shape the future of international accountability for mass atrocities and define the scope of state responsibility under the Genocide Convention.

Article I of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide:

The Genocide Convention of December 9th, 1948

“The Contracting Parties confirm that genocide, whether committed in time of peace or in time of war, is a crime under international law which they undertake to prevent and to punish. (ICJ, Article I).

Article II of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide:

The Genocide Convention of December 9th, 1948

“In the present Convention, genocide means any of the following acts committed with intent to destroy, in whole or in part, a national, ethnical, racial or religious group, as such:

- a. Killing members of the group;
- b. Causing serious bodily or mental harm to members of the group;
- c. Deliberately inflicting on the group conditions of life calculated to bring about its physical destruction in whole or in part;
- d. Imposing measures intended to prevent births within the group;
- e. Forcibly transferring children of the group to another group.” (ICJ, Article II).

Article III of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide:

The Genocide Convention of December 9th, 1948

“The following acts shall be punishable:

- a. Genocide;

- b. Conspiracy to commit genocide;
- c. Direct and public incitement to commit genocide;
- d. Attempt to commit genocide;
- e. Complicity in genocide.” (ICJ, Article III).

Article IX of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide:

The Genocide Convention of December 9th, 1948

“Disputes between the Contracting Parties relating to the interpretation, application or fulfilment of the present Convention, including those relating to the responsibility of a State for genocide or for any of the other acts enumerated in article III, shall be submitted to the International Court of Justice at the request of any of the parties to the dispute.” (Bilateral Convention for Judicial Settlement, Arbitration, and Conciliation, Article IX).

Article III, for your reference:

“The following acts shall be punishable:

- (a) Genocide;
- (b) Conspiracy to commit genocide;
- (c) Direct and public incitement to commit genocide;
- (d) Attempt to commit genocide;
- (e) Complicity in genocide” (Bilateral Convention for Judicial Settlement, Arbitration, and Conciliation, Article III).

Article 36 of the International Court of Justice Statute

“The states parties to the present Statute may at any time declare that they recognize as compulsory ipso facto and without special agreement, in relation to any other state accepting the same obligation, the jurisdiction of the Court in all legal disputes concerning:
